IFRM to Fill Board Vacancies

The International Fire Relief Mission is accepting nominations for four positions to complete its advisory board for a three-year term.

The International Fire Relief Mission is seeking four fire-service experts to serve three-year terms on its board of advisors. The board members will help IFRM achieve its goal of providing donated fire and EMS equipment to firefighters in developing countries.

“This is a wonderful opportunity for those who are passionate about firefighter safety to give something back where it is most needed,” says Ron Gruening, IFRM president and CEO. “Since our inception in 2007, we have been firefighters helping firefighters. And as the need for IFRM’s humanitarian aid rapidly grows, we are looking for committed individuals to lend their expertise to help IFRM give firefighters in some of the world’s poorer cities the tools they need to be safe and effective.”
